

“POSITIONING SAINT LUCIA’S PROPERTY MARKETS FOR THE NEXT DECADE”

The April 2015 Seminar follows on from the Institute of Surveyors (St. Lucia) Inc, (ISSLU) Seminar undertaken in November 2013. This last Seminar was titled "Assessing the Impact of Property Valuation and Construction Issues on the Economy," attracted about 120 professionals and achieved a very good outcome.

The 2015 Seminar comes at a time when Saint Lucia is at a critical stage of its' development after being greatly impacted by the rapid and pervasive changes in world and regional economies.

New strategies need to be developed and processes re–engineered to increase the efficiency of use of resources available for property development.

The forthcoming seminar will present modern options and strategies for addressing these concerns. Experts (with international, regional and local experience) will share points of view, present alternative models and share experiences.

The presentations will cover a variety of issues, including presenting new models, standards and demands arising from regionalization and globalization, governance choices, innovations and participatory development models.

Experts will highlight the opportunities to use modern technologies with economies of scale to bring efficiencies to current work processes.

In addition, this Seminar will review the ongoing debates about property market related legislation.

The experts and professionals will offer an opportunity for open roundtable discussions at the Seminar level.
